How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

The Horizon Equity Premium Income Fund consists of an underlying equity portfolio of large-cap stocks tilted towards dividend paying securities, and a covered call strategy that sells short maturity out-of-the money call options on a portion of the Fund's total assets. The goal of this combined portfolio is capital appreciation and income. For the year ending November 30, 2024, the Fund outperformed expectations in a strong up market for domestic equities.

The Fund's stock selection process aims to deliver a portfolio of stocks that Horizon Investments believes are high quality with balanced fundamentals, while maintaining modest sector deviations from broad markets. The Fund's underlying equity portfolio captured a majority of the gains in broad large-cap stocks during the period, a better-than-expected result given the narrow mega-cap led market environment.

The covered call option overlay detracted from performance during the period by capping some of the gains in the Fund relative to its underlying equity portfolio. Some of this headwind to performance was mitigated by two design choices for the call overlay: covering only a portion of the Funds assets and selecting short maturity options.
